

Mark Hoog, Author: The Growing Field Book Series

Mark joins the literary world by way of the airline industry. The youngest pilot hired, and youngest Captain, at a major U.S. Airline Mark has spent his career providing command and leadership training to airline crews from around the world including China, New Zealand, Russia, the U.S. Military, and FAA representatives.

Inspired by the loss of a friend flying as Captain on flight 93 on September 11th, Mark authored the Growing Field children's personal growth and leadership book series. The series, best described as Tony Robbins meets Dr. Seuss, is the first children's series designed as a tool to teach young children the life changing ideas and behaviors associated with personal growth, high self-esteem, self-empowerment, leadership and strong character. The series has captured national attention and has been endorsed by former Secretary of Education Richard Riley, top motivation speaker W. Mitchell, top success coach Brian Tracy and by former President Bill Clinton.

Mr. Hoog is the founder and Executive Director of the Children's Leadership Institute (CLI), a Colorado non-profit organization that uses literature, public speaking, animated films, community outreach, television programming and public service announcements to share the personal growth and leadership message with children in hopes they fully understand their life is without limit.

Mark travels the country and speaks with children, business organizations and parent groups to deliver his message on Conscious Leadership; A lesson shown to him by Jason Dahl that challenges people from all walks of life to develop their unique gifts and talents and to share these gifts with the world through their own leadership contribution.

Mr. Hoog lives in Colorado with his wife Kristi and their three children Branson, Morgan and Mitchell and can be contacted through the Growing Field web site at Mhoog@growingfield.com
